In facilities across the country, healthcare providers struggle with the challenges caused by the communications gap that separates a facility's clinical network or EHR and its medical device data. The nursing staff often traverse this divide with a pen and paper—wasting time, compromising patient safety, and hindering productivity.

Together with our certified EHR vendors, Welch Allyn is bridging the gap. Our broad range of connected devices communicate directly with the industry's leading EHR systems—eliminating delays and transcription errors. A connectivity solution from Welch Allyn will help drive your practice both today and in the future by ensuring that accurate, complete and timely patient diagnostic data is always available—anytime, anywhere.
